

No.5

Conjecture formulation via machine learning

Alexey Pozdnyakov

Princeton University

Through a series of examples in number theory, we demonstrate the utility of machine learning in conjecture formulation and pattern recognition in mathematics. We show how renowned results, such as the prime number theorem and the Birch and Swinnerton-Dyer conjecture, could have been discovered using generic machine learning techniques. Recent conjectures that arose from machine learning will also be highlighted.